

Enlargement & Integration Workshop
Energy Security and Climate Change

Organized by the JRC - IE

*30 September – 1 October 2010,
Crowne Plaza Hotel, Amsterdam,
The Netherlands*

Background

Over recent years, climate change and energy security have risen to the forefront of energy policy. Assessing the interactions between these two fields is necessary to design and develop cost-effective policies that will both ensure the security of our energy system and the reduction of greenhouse gas emissions.

A better knowledge of their complex interactions is key to building a fair, secure and sustainable energy future.

Objectives

The workshop aims at investigating the interactions between energy security and climate change. The discussion will be focused around the following themes:

- Climate change, economic development and energy security: assessing the interactions
- Challenges coming from developing countries and emerging economies
- The need for technology transfer
- The EU energy and climate package: its impacts on European energy security

Organiser

The workshop is organized by the Energy Security Unit of the Institute for Energy, a scientific institute of the Joint Research Centre (JRC) of the European Commission.

Language

The Workshop language will be English.

Structure

The workshop will be in the form of an open discussions based on :

- Contribution by JRC experts
- Presentations by invited experts
- Input and comments by participants
